

THE PICKEREL

As Cambridge's oldest pub, a visit to the Pickerel is like an ode to the rich history in which the city is so generously steeped. First licensed in 1608, with parts of the building dating back as far as 1540, the pub sits moments from the serene calm of the River Cam. Within easy reach of both Magdalene College and the University of Cambridge, it has long been a favoured haunt of scholars and academics, with figures such as Samuel Pepys and C. S. Lewis among its rumoured former patrons.
