

THE THREE TUNS

Tucked away on a discreet mews street that once housed stabling and servants' quarters for London's prosperous middle classes, The Three Tuns has been welcoming the capital's grafters since the 1780s. Having survived the Blitz and the sweeping changes that reshaped the West End, it remains the last survivor of the original mews. Today, it sits quietly in the heart of the capital, just a short stroll from the bustle of Oxford Street and Marble Arch - quite literally hidden in plain sight.
